

FAIR CHANCE EMPLOYER QUARTERLY REPORT

November
2024

CONFIDENTIAL: THIS REPORT IS INTENDED FOR THE EXCLUSIVE
USE OF THE PURCHASING INDIVIDUAL OR ORGANIZATION.

Introduction

Honest Jobs is proud to present our latest quarterly report on Fair Chance Employers. This report identifies employers actively hiring individuals with felony convictions.

For each employer, you'll find data on the number of justice-involved individuals hired, a breakdown of the types of felony convictions represented, and the industry in which the employer operates. This information provides a clearer view of current hiring practices and highlights opportunities for those supporting justice-involved individuals in finding sustainable employment.

About Honest Jobs

Honest Jobs is a fair chance employment platform dedicated to helping individuals with criminal records find meaningful work and access essential reentry resources. By connecting job seekers with background-friendly employers, Honest Jobs works to reduce the barriers to employment often faced by justice-involved individuals. Through our platform, we gather direct feedback from job seekers on their employment experiences, enabling us to capture real-world hiring trends and advocate for fair-chance hiring practices.

In addition to job-matching services, Honest Jobs offers specialized tools for reentry professionals. Our Reentry Navigator supports organizations in managing and guiding individuals through their job search and resource needs, offering a tailored approach to support justice-involved individuals toward successful reintegration. Reentry Planner, a proprietary tablet application used within correctional facilities, enables incarcerated individuals to create comprehensive reentry plans, equipping them with job opportunities and support resources to prepare for life and work post-release.

Data Collection and Methodology

The data in this report was derived from job seeker feedback on the Honest Jobs platform, where individuals share details about their employment journeys. This allows us to capture accurate, current hiring trends, including the specific types of felony convictions among hired individuals. The report organizes these convictions into key categories, offering reentry professionals a structured view of how employers are embracing background-friendly hiring. To ensure data reliability and relevance, we included only employers with at least two hires.

Data Accessibility

In addition to this summary, you will also find a separate Excel file containing the full dataset. The Excel file allows you to easily search, filter, and sort the data to meet specific needs, including by industry and conviction type, making it a versatile tool for reviewing and analyzing employer hiring trends for justice-involved individuals.

Disclaimer

The information in this report was collected from tens of thousands of justice-involved individuals on the Honest Jobs platform, and its accuracy cannot be guaranteed. This report should not be interpreted as a guarantee that any listed employer will hire individuals with a specific type of conviction. Employers assess each candidate individually and make hiring decisions based on various factors, including the nature of the conviction in relation to the job responsibilities, the time since the conviction, evidence of rehabilitation, and other relevant considerations. No employers requested to be included in this report. If an employer is not listed, it simply means that job seekers with a felony conviction on Honest Jobs have not reported being hired by that company, not that the employer does not or will not hire people with criminal records.
